

TOYBOX STUDIOS PRESENTS

Translation Toy Box

翻译玩具箱

Learn a language from what you already watch, read and play.

Every word is a toy: click it, keep it, play with it.

WATCH

Any video becomes a lesson

Draw a box over the subtitles of anything you watch, in any player or website. Each line is read as it appears, translated on your own computer, and turned into words you can click.

- Click a word: its meaning, its sound, its characters and how to write them
- No subtitles? It listens to the sound your PC plays, writes down what's said and tells the speakers apart
- Every line saved in a transcript, with the moment it was said

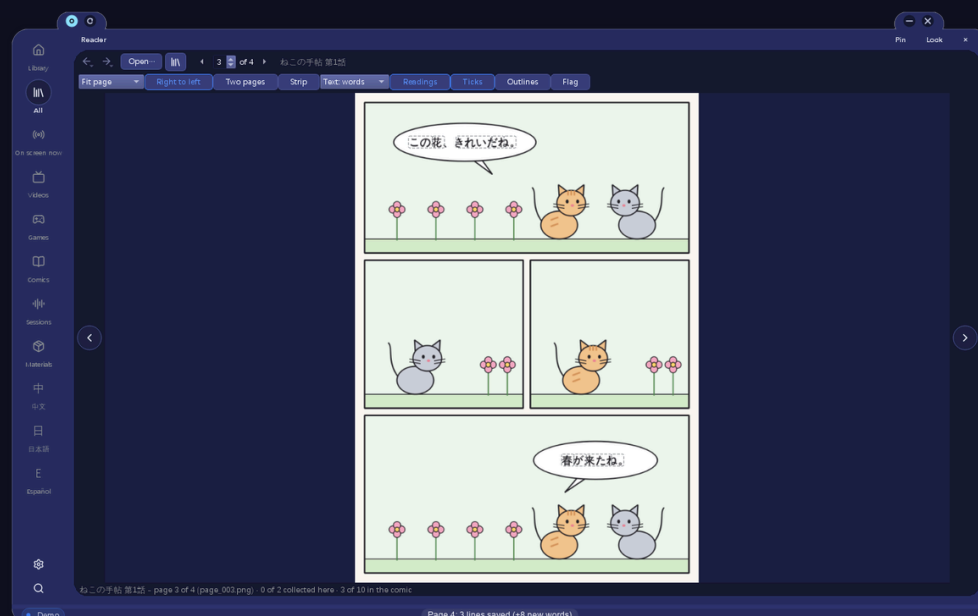

READ

Comics and manga, bubble by bubble

Open a comic and the Reader finds its speech bubbles and reads them. Click a bubble to collect its line, then click any word in it.

- Pages read ahead while you look at this one
- Right-to-left, two pages side by side, or one long strip
- Every bubble you collect joins your transcripts and your words

PLAY

Learn from the games you play

Keep a game's lines beside it while you play, or load its own text. For some games there is a Compendium: every card and item in the language you're learning, with its meaning under it.

- Each card's name in both languages, its sound under it
- Search the whole game in either language

STUDY

Review what you actually met

Your flashcards are made from your own lines: the sentence you heard, the bubble you read. Grammar points are found in what you watched, and come up in the line you met them in.

- Mark the words you know, and see where you met each one
- Make an Anki deck from any episode, with the audio

WRAP UP

Every session ends with what you learned

When you stop, the app lists the new words you met and the grammar it saw. Tick the ones worth keeping and they go into a list of their own.

- Keep, clear or come back to each transcript
- Star a grammar point to study it

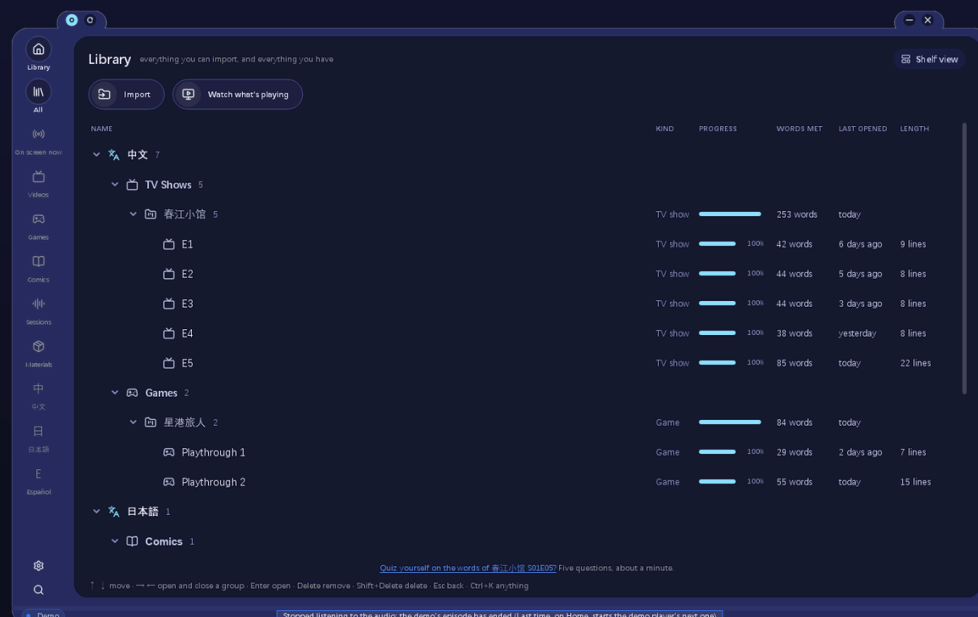

LIBRARY

Everything you've watched, read and played

Shows, comics, games and sessions, each language in its own place, with how far you got and how many words you met in each.

- Import subtitles, a folder of pages or a game's text
- Ctrl+K finds any command, pane, transcript or word

LANGUAGES

Learn from any of five, in any of five

Chinese, Spanish, English, Japanese and Korean, from whichever of them you speak. Chinese is the most complete; Japanese and Korean are the newest, so tell us what they get wrong.

中文 Chinese

Español Spanish

English English

日本語 Japanese

한국어 Korean

YOURS

Free, and it stays on your computer

No account, no ads, no tracking. Reading the screen, listening and translating all happen on your own PC; what you watch and the words you learn stay there. The first start downloads the dictionary and reading models, once.

GETTING IT

Free, for Windows 10 and 11

Download it from <https://simon.tail7af16e.ts.net/>.

This is a test build: it updates itself when a new one is published, and Help → Send Feedback goes straight to the developer. Small things count: something that confused you, a button you couldn't find, a moment you enjoyed.